Dear fellow NAFC Member,

About this time every year, NAFC members by the thousands begin planning their fishing trips for the coming year. It's a fun exercise when you begin to consider all the possibilities, both fresh and salt.

I learned early on that one of the most effective exercises when planning a trip, whether it be a weekend jaunt to a local lake or a 7-day trip to a luxury wilderness resort, is to define my primary goals for going. Catching a mess of crappies is one thing, targeting a world line-class record tarpon is another.

I find the more money I plan to spend, the more time I spend focusing on goals.

Here are the four goals I set for my last trip:

1. There had to be solid potential for big fish.

For that reason, lodges/camps that required anglers to release trophy fish were given priority over those that allowed the harvest of large fish.

2. The accommodations had to be comfortable and clean, and the menu good and varied.

3. Lodges/camps that could be reached with a day or less of travel ranked higher than those requiring two days or more of travel on each end of the trip.

4. Price was also a big factor. Like always, lower is better than higher, but I also know you get what you pay for. I'll spend a little more to fish top-notch destinations at peak times.

Fortunately, there are several superb sources of information. In my searches, I start with this book, North American Fisherman magazine and other angling publications, friends, sports shows and the internet to not only identify potential destinations, but also to begin narrowing them down to a manageable number.

Then I begin investigating individual lodge packages, prime fishing times and travel options. My favorite trips are those that offer 3-5 days of fishing. That way I can fish hard for the length of the trip, but not get burnt out after several days on the water.

The downside of shorter trips is the higher risk of weather issues and poor fishing.

Fuel costs will be an issue this year. It now costs a dollar or more to fly a single can of pop into some of the more remote lodges, and to stay profitable lodge owners must pass on those higher costs to consumers. Seven-day trips to a number of remote destinations can easily run $4,000 or more and costs will continue to grow in the years to come.

Now is that time to book your "trip of a lifetime." The prices will never be lower, the fishing any better, than right now.

So start dreaming! Sailfish!?! Trophy bass! Giant pike! Redfish? Your trip starts right now.

Steve

GENERAL INFORMATION

Approval Process

In order for a fishing service to be approved and be eligible to be included in this directory, it must receive at least a 75 percent recommended rating from North American Fishing Club members who have submitted reports on the service. A minimum of two reports submitted within the last three years is also required.

Submitting a Fishing Report

NAFC members who would like to report on a guide, camp, or charter service may download or request an official NAFC Fishing Report form by logging onto the Club Web site at fishingclub.com, or may request a form by calling the Club Member Services Department at (800) 843-6232.

Things to Remember when Using a Fishing Service

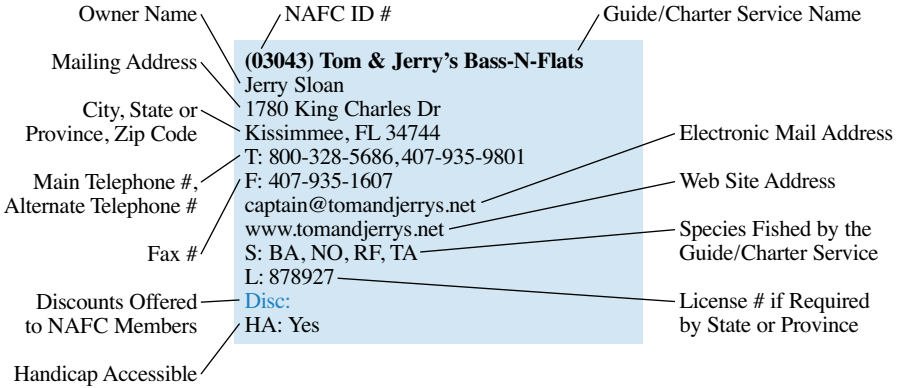

NAFC members should obtain current licensing information for guide/charter services from the government agencies in the state or province in which they plan to fish.

Members should also be aware that some laws state that individuals using the services of an unlicensed guide/charter may be held in violation of the law. Because annual license renewals do not have a common date, the NAFC cannot guarantee that any of the listed services hold a current license even though a license number may be listed.

NAFC members who know of incorrect information pertaining to names, addresses, phone numbers, etc. in this directory should send updated information to: NAFC – FRD, PO Box 3430, Minnetonka, MN 55343.

The NAFC does not guarantee in any way that by booking with a fishing service listed herein that you will be satisfied with your trip. We assume no liability of any kind, however remote, for your reliance on this directory. The reports used to qualify fishing services for this directory are based solely on NAFC members' experiences, and not on the experiences of the NAFC or its staff.

Support Your Sport

QUICK . . . name a conservation organization that is working on behalf of both anglers and hunters. Or . . . name a conservation organization that is supporting a variety of fish and a variety of critters.

There is only one.

Wildlife Forever . . . your nonprofit conservation arm of the North American Fishing Club and the North American Hunting Club.

As an NAFC member, Wildlife Forever is your conservation group, dedicated to ensuring healthy populations of all types of fish and game.

Take a look at the abbreviated lists below. If you can find two or more species that you enjoy, then Wildlife Forever deserves your support.

FISH

Largemouth bass	Rainbow Trout
Atlantic salmon	Walleye
Muskie	Channel catfish
Northern Pike	Cutthroat trout
Brown Trout	Bluefish
Smallmouth bass	Steelhead
Coho	Crappie

CRITTERS

White-tailed deer	Mallard
Pheasant	Grizzly bear
Wild Turkey	Moose
Ruffed grouse	Quail
Black bear	Elk
Bighorn Sheep	Wood duck
Mule deer	Canada goose

Help Protect The Future of Fishing and Hunting

Join your fellow members by making a tax deductible donation to Wildlife Forever to support your sport and secure the future of fishing and hunting. There are three easy ways:

1. Make your donation through the mail to: Wildlife Forever, 2700 Freeway Blvd #1000, Brooklyn Center MN 55430 (include your name and mailing address so we can thank you).
2. Send an email with your name & mailing address to info@wildlife forever.org. A donation form will be promptly sent to you.
3. Or make a donation using the Internet.

MEMBER TIPS

Minnow Rig

When fishing a minnow jig, more often than not I will rig the minnow the following way: The hook should go in the mouth and then out the gill. The minnow is then slid up the hook so it is “kissing” the jig head. To keep the minnow “kissing” the jig head, I then bend the minnow slightly and run the hook up the belly and out the back. This rigging makes it easier to fish the weeds and puts the hook further back on the minnow to catch short-strikers. It does kill the minnow much quicker than other rigging options, but the fisherman has more control over the lure and can deliver his own action through an aggressive jigging action.

Sean Gohman, Waconia, MN

Enticing Worms

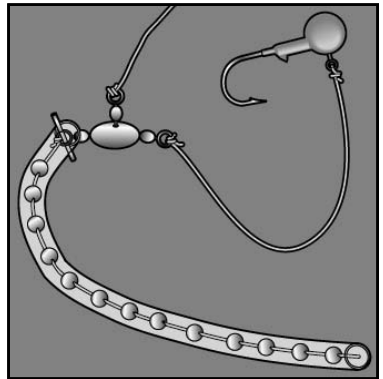

If you want to make your live worms more enticing, soak them in beet juice overnight. In the morning, take them out and catch some fish.

Scott Sewall, Hillsboro, TX

Versatile Sinker

For a versatile no-snag bottom-bouncer type sinker to be used for drifting or trolling for walleye or catfish, I use a three-way swivel. Then on the dropper use very heavy mono 6- to 8-inches with a knot tied to the bottom. Clamp on split-shot sinkers evenly spaced from bottom to top, as many as it takes to keep it on the bottom. More current or depth calls for more or heavier sinkers. Then, to keep the works from snagging, slip over it an equal length of surgical tubing and peg it to the hole in the three-way swivel. This rig works great — keeping your amount of tackle to the minimum because it is so versatile and changeable.

Stephen Turnis, Dubuque, IA

Perch for Perch

Perch swim in schools, therefore you want to cast to the same spots as quickly as possible after a good strike. A good bait to use for this (where legal) is to take a perch, cut it open, and cut a strip of stomach lining $\frac{1}{4}$ -inch by 2 inches long, bait it on a small, thin bait holder hook and it will last for many bites. Note: Check your state's regulations to see if this practice is legal in your state.

Jeremy Gooch, Sturgis, MI

Long-Lasting Doughballs

If you like to fish for cats with doughballs, here's a tip that can save you money. Put your doughball on the hook like usual. Then, take a small piece of nylon hose and put it around the doughball. Fasten the nylon hose onto the line using a small rubber band. This will help your doughballs last longer, while allowing the scent to still be released. This is extremely effective in the warmer rivers down south, where the doughballs tend to fall off the hook after a short while.

Reed Gunter, Chapin, SC

High Floater

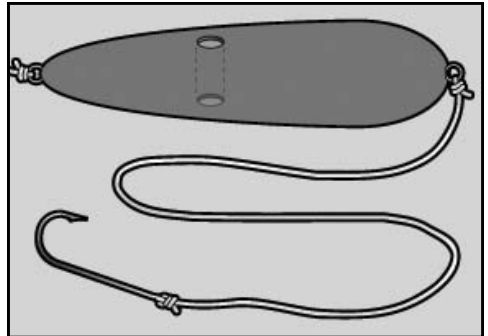

When Carolina rigging, take a hypodermic needle and inject air into your bait. This will make it float higher in the water.

Coleby Gilliland, Deatsville, AL

Try This Successful Rig

I have had huge success with this rig on lake or stream. I use the clear torpedo bubble with $\frac{3}{16}$ -inch hole drilled through to sink and cast with distance. Any type bait can be used: trailing approximately 18 to 24 inches behind the bubble. The bubble attracts fish while moving the bait behind.

Tom P. Hoffman, Pottsville, PA

Straighten Out Your Leeches

In most cases, leeches tend to ball up on jigs and don't want to swim. To prevent this, slide a short piece of surgical tubing over the collar of the jig. Hook the leech far enough ahead of the sucker so the sucker can attach to the tubing. Leeches that attach themselves to something are less likely to ball up.

Nick Waszczak, Des Plaines, IL

Carp Dough Recipe

½ cup brown sugar
2 cups cornmeal
½ cup flour
1¾ cup molasses
canned corn liquid or water

Combine brown sugar, cornmeal, flour and molasses. Mix thoroughly then add corn liquid or water (whichever you choose to use) until a stiff dough is formed. Chill if a stiffer dough is desired. Chill if a stiffer dough is desired. This recipe is also good for catfish.

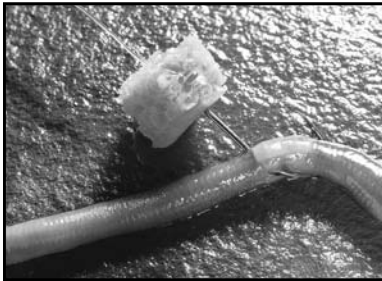

Robert Owens, Baltimore, MD

Add Scent and Action

My tip is something that I learned from an old Indian guide 30-plus years ago in Northwest Ontario. One natural way to add scent and action to a jig is to cut the bottom portion of skin from underneath a walleye's jaw (obviously, you do this to a walleye you are keeping to eat). This creates a natural "V" shaped chunk of fresh fish flesh. Insert the jig hook in the pointed end of the "V" and you'll have a natural, tough, scented jig trailer.

Note: Check your state's regulations to see if this practice is legal in your state.

Wayne Kottman, Lexington Park, MD

Long-Lasting Attractant

To keep the fish attractants from washing off your bait, slide a small piece of sponge onto a hook and then dip it into the attractant and let the sponges soak some up.

Lee Jones, Davie, FL

Catching Bait Fish

Take a 2- to 5-gallon can or jug with a large screw-on lid. Cut 2 angle slots in the large removable lid 3 to 6 inches long, 1½ to 2½ inches wide, large enough for Wild Shiner's or bait to enter. Bait unit with a can of cat food. Cut small holes in food can. Release food at your discretion. Hang the large can (jug) off your dock. Bait or wild shiners can be harvested at your discretion. Use, save or sell the bait. Chum area over large can for better results. You can cast a net over the area after short term results. This makes excellent largemouth bass or catfish bait.

Captain A. C. "Andy" Lowe, Satsuma, FL

Bait for Bait

Catch crickets for bait. Crickets make excellent bait for bass and panfish, and bread and sugar make excellent bait for crickets. Sprinkle the bread with sugar, lightly moisten, and leave the bread on the ground overnight beneath a cloth or newspaper. You'll collect a day's supply of bait.

Jason Hilton, Telford, TN

Bottom Fishing

When bottom fishing for striped bass or catfish, I will make my cast and let it settle to the bottom. Then I will pull a little slack in my line in front of the reel and clip a small bobber on the line. When I get a strike or a pickup, the bobber is a sure giveaway.

John Hempsmyer, Redwood Valley, CA

No More Tangles

I fish in a small pond where my line frequently gets caught on logs and tree limbs under water. Instead of cutting the line whenever it breaks, I pull my line back, almost to the point of breaking, and then let the line out very fast. Most of the time this works great.

Jordan Cunningham, Durham, NC

Baitcaster Backlashes

To prevent serious backlashes follow these directions. Make a long cast with your baitcaster, pull out your line another yard and take a piece of electrical tape and wrap it around the spool. This will prevent the spool from overrunning past the tape.

William Warren, Roxboro, NC

Side Arm Solutions

Side arm is the best way to cast if the wind is blowing strongly off the water because with the side cast, you'll be whipping your casting weight on a horizontal plane.

Leo Seffelaar, Broadview, SK

Increased Casting Distance

I discovered a great way to get more casting distance out of my fly line. I use a mild, vinyl seat protectant such as Armor All to clean the line. Not only does it clean the line, the protectant gives it a slick finish, which I believe allows the line to flow more freely through the line guides. Simply hold a shop rag in one hand and spray it well with the protectant. Close your fist, pull the fly line through and you're in business.

Brian Hilbert, Powell, WY

Not Your Average Cast

When I was out fly fishing during the summer, I saw a group of good-size bass in a slow current spot on the river. I wanted to find a new approach to getting them to strike. I reached over and grabbed a leaf and set my fly on it. I gave myself a lot of slack so my fly would drift right to the spot I wanted. When my fly got close enough for the bass to see it, I started shaking my line until the fly fell off. I think the fly falling off the leaf resembled an ant falling off a piece of bark or leaf. This method proved very worthy. I caught 3 out of the 5 bass.

Doug Wesserling, Dearborn Heights, MI

Casting Remedy

Whenever you cast a bait over a limb, there's a trick to getting it free. When the lure swings back and forth, don't wait until it moves away from you, because it puts the bait in line with the branch and it usually gets caught when you apply pressure. The 'secret' lies in waiting until the lure swings towards you then pull the rod so the lure is thrown back and over the limb.

Steve von Brandt, Wilmington, DE

Casting for Distance

To maintain the smooth, long distance cast we all desire, it's important to tune up even our new spinning reels at least twice a year. First clear the line off the spool. Then, using a buffing wheel on a drill, buff the edge of the spool until smooth. I use either an aluminum or plastic buffing compound. I can feel the difference by touch as well as the improved performance.

David Wiggs, Carterville, IL

Down Home Weed Eater

Fishing vegetation is fun and productive, but can be a pain in the neck. Hang ups commonly occur, usually resulting in lost lures. To remedy this problem I use a fillet knife taped to an extendable crappie pole. This will work on most any type of vegetation, including lily pads and hydrilla.

Coleby Gilliland, Deatsville, AL

Underhand Casts

The underhand or flip cast is the approved method when you're on a high perch over the water fishing a pier, bridge or bulkhead when there are low overhangs or tree branches that might entangle your line. Here's how to do it: Point the rod tip straight out in front of you. Flip it down, whip it up again and let go of your line. Your lure won't cast as far as the sidearm or overhead cast, but it usually will fetch the opposite river or canal bank, perhaps providing more accuracy too.

Leo Seffelaar, Broadview, SK

Modified Buzzbait

When fishing a buzzbait, drill 3 or 4 holes in the bent portion of the blade. File down the bars by the holes which make the lure bubble and attract big bass from deep water and thick cover.

Tim Cronin, Phoenix, AZ

Cold-Weather Fishing

When fishing in extremely cold temperatures, trim your line close to your knot. That prevents icing up so not to affect the wobble of your lures.

Justin Albert, Liverpool, PA

Fishing After a Cold Front

After a cold front, a lot of fishermen think that bass are completely uncatchable, but for those that have patience, the result will be rewarding. A good method of presentation is to take a 4- to 6-inch grape-colored worm and pitch it in next to boulders and weeds. Let it lie there for several minutes without moving it. This presentation, called "dead worm" by some anglers, proves itself a winner over and over.

Jeremy Gooch, Sturgis, MI

Put Ketchup on Your Spoon

I always keep a couple of small packets of ketchup in my tackle box to use as a polish for spoons and spinner blades. Just smear the ketchup on the lure, wait two minutes and then rub off. It's safe and environmentally friendly.

Peter Fedra, Santee, CA

Glitter for Power Baits

I bait fish with Power Bait and have found that the glitter they add really does attract fish over the non-glitter type. So I bought some glitter from a craft store and added it to the Power Bait. I simply take a ball of Power Bait and drop it in a plastic bag containing glitter. Then I shake the bag a little bit until the bait is covered in the glitter. When this bait hits the water, some of the glitter will come off and create a “puff” of glitter in the water. This attracts the trout to come and investigate. This method has doubled my catch. Now I don’t go fishing without my bag of glitter.

Kong Shang, Reno, NV

Keep Your Fly Dry

If you’re having trouble keeping dry flies from sinking, I have a solution. Bring some Vaseline or vegetable oil on your next trip and grease the line. It won’t hurt the fish and it will keep dry flies on the surface.

Anthony Bertrand, Lincoln, NE

Crafty Lures

I have improvised an inexpensive panfish grub lure from white or colored pipe cleaners. Wrap three or four turns of pipe cleaner around a plain lead head jig. A slight bend to the hook shank improves appearance and is even more effective when fish scent is allowed to soak into the fibers.

Robert Kukupka, Rockaway, NJ

Reuse Old Worms

I fish with plastic worms and spinnerbaits a lot. When the plastic worms become no longer usable Texas style, I cut the tops off and use them on the spinnerbaits as trailers. If they are straight tail worms, I split the tail in half to get more action out of them.

Allen Schoessow, Milwaukee, WI

Make-It-Yourself Treble Hook

Tackle shops sell “soft bait” treble hooks for about 50 cents per piece. They are easy to make at home for much less. Just take the springs out of cheap ball-point pens (or buy springs at a craft store), cut them to the length of the shank of a treble hook and slide it down the shank. Now pinch the last coil of the spring around the shank of the hook. Now you have a “soft bait” treble that is just as good as any bought in a store.

Kong Shang, Reno, NV

Crankbait Quick-Fixes

The one bad thing about crankbaits or minnow baits is that when you finally make a good cast, the line gets tangled around one of the treble hooks. Put a 1-inch piece of a coffee straw onto the line before tying and it will be tangle free.

Ray Lucas, Wesley Chapel, FL

Turbo Spinner

Before tying on a spinner or other bait, just slip a small prop and bead on the line. This creates extra flash, vibration and a turbulence of bubbles. Good all around, whether buzzing, free falling or just cranking.

Steve Volz, Spokane, WA

Dyeing Spinnerbaits

I use this tip to add life to an old, chrome, dual-blade spinnerbait. First, dye the blades with some shotgun barrel bluing that you can purchase from your local ammo/gun store. You can use cotton swabs to apply the bluing; make sure you follow the directions on the bottle. To keep the bluing on, I apply some clear-coat epoxy on top of it. You'll now have a spinnerbait that will work great. If I'm fishing with spinnerbaits, I use my dyed spinnerbaits 99% of the time. I catch both bass and pike on them. You can also add a pork trailer to double your chances.

Just Brinks, Wyoming, MI

Float Flies Longer

For the trout fisherman, take some dry flies, and with scissors, cut some of the hackle off the belly of the flies. This will make the fly lay lower on the surface of the water and will make it more visible to the fish. It will also keep the fly floating longer since the hackle will be more dense and will repel the water more.

Junior Martins, Garfield, NJ

Fire Up Your Baits

Are you tired of fish tearing up your soft plastics and crappie jigs? I have found a cheap, quick way to repair them. Simply take a match or lighter and apply the flame to the damaged part of the bait. The plastic will melt and cover the torn or damaged part of the bait. Then run under cold water to help the plastic harden faster. I have applied this method to some of my baits and have caught many more fish on them.

Brandon Hutchinson, Mt. Vernon, IN

Polished Lures

A simple and inexpensive way to customize your lures is to paint the lures with nail polish. This is great for when you're out on the water and your lure is just the wrong color. The polish only takes about five minutes to dry and comes in all colors of the rainbow and then some! There are also nail polishes that have sparkles in them for added flash.

Mitchell Masuda, Salinas, CA

Attracting Trout

Melt down Vaseline and add your favorite fish attractant to the mix. Once the Vaseline hardens, rub a light coat on your lure. I find this is most effective on trout.

Justin Albert, Liverpool, PA

Odor Removal

After Cleaning fish, wash your hands with shaving cream to remove the odor.

George Dougherty, Jr., Belle Plaine, IA

Successful Netting

Have you ever wanted to net a fighting fish but accidentally missed because the hooks from the lure got tangled up in the net because it was hanging so low? To solve this, take a woman's hair band or a small, thick rubber band and wrap it around the handle. Pull the net through so it is flat. When the fish is in the net, the weight of the fish causes the bag to pull free of the hair band and the net opens up with the fish at the bottom.

Jethro Frydrychowski, Loudenville, OH

Fish Alert

How many times have you lost a fish, while dead bait fishing, because you couldn't tell if a fish took your bait or not? Here's a sure-fire way to know. Once your bait is on the bottom, place a small bobber on your line near the rod tip. When the bobber's gone you know a fish has visited.

Dan Carlson, Two Harbors, MN

Super Scaling

This tip will help fellow members who scale their fish. I mostly use this on panfish. First you take your bluegill and place it tail first on the clip-type gutting board. Then you take a garden hose, put the nozzle on 'stream' and blow the scales off from the tail to the head. I have scaled 30 panfish in 5 to 10 minutes this way and did not get any scales on me.

Paul Mulvin, Erie, PA

Shallow Water Walleye

When the sun is high in the sky, many walleye fishermen move deeper. It is my experience, especially early in the year when the carp are spawning, that the walleyes can actually be found in very shallow water. The walleyes follow the carp to eat whatever the carp are kicking up.

Matthew Gohman, Waconia, MN

Ice House Heat

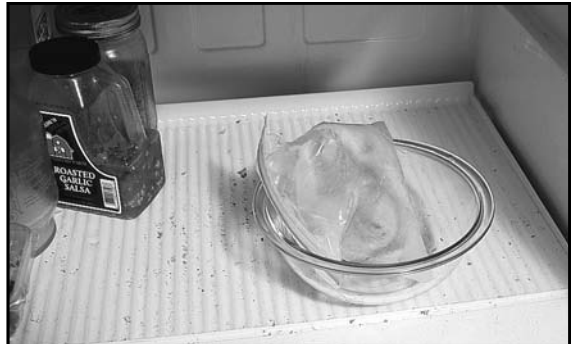

Here is a tip for making an ice shanty heater: Clean out a one-pound coffee can and place a roll of toilet paper inside the can. Fill the center section of the toilet paper with denatured alcohol. Let stand until alcohol absorbs, then light the top of the paper. This is very clean burning and has no fumes. Note: Always practice safe measures when using fire.

Richard Johnson, Elida, OH

Fish Thawing

There is a correct way to thaw fish. A frozen fish should be thawed slowly. Either put it in the refrigerator for 24 hours before cooking or place it in cold water to thaw. If the fish is thawed too quickly, the outside flesh may deteriorate while the inside is still frozen too hard to cook through.

Jason Hilton, Telford, TN

Line Cutter

If you want a small, inexpensive line cutter that will fit into your pocket, try a credit-card-size letter opener. They are sharp enough to cut a braided line.

Steve von Brandt, Wilmington, DE

Cleaner Fish Cleaning

My tip would be to always wear disposable latex gloves when cleaning fish. The gloves come in a variety of sizes, so they can accommodate any hand size and they help you to hold onto the fish, which makes fish cleaning a breeze.

Todd Fellman, Crystal, MN

Remove Those Scratches

Remove light scratches from your fish locator display face by rubbing it with a baking soda toothpaste.

Richard Johnson, Elida, OH

NAFC CATCH & RELEASE TIPS FOR RELEASING FISH SAFELY

- 1) Keep the fight time to a minimum, and play the fish to hand as quickly as possible.
- 2) Use a knotless catch and release net, or better yet, no net at all.
- 3) Use barbless hooks when possible. They're easier to set and easier to remove, causing far less tissue damage than barbed hooks.
- 4) When handling the fish, wet your hands before touching it, and support it carefully. Keep handling to a minimum, and be gentle. Measure and photograph fish quickly and gently, and get the fish back in the water as soon as possible.
- 5) When lipping small fish, let them hang vertically — don't crank the jaw. Doing so can damage the cartilage in its jaw making it difficult for the fish's mouth to function properly, reducing its chances of survival. Hold large fish horizontally to support the body evenly.
- 6) Revive the fish thoroughly before releasing it. In moving water, point fish into the current. In still water, gently slide it back and forth to force water through the gills until the fish is ready to swim away. When the fish tries to swim off, it's probably ready.

TAXIDERMISTS

Want to judge quality taxidermy and replica work? Wait 10, 15 years and see if you still like the piece. By then, you'll have forgotten what you paid and base your assessment on the mount alone.

Good taxidermy doesn't come cheap. Nor should it. It combines craftsmanship and art, and those who excel at it have worked years to hone their skills.

Sure, you can bargain shop, but why? If you pay a fair price and get a high-quality mount that lasts a lifetime, money spent soon becomes a non-factor. Get a poor mount, and even at bargain basement prices you'll remember every penny wasted.

As an added benefit of your membership in the North American Fishing Club, we've compiled this list of taxidermists, many of whom are members of one or more respected taxidermy associations. These taxidermists are willing to offer special services or even discounts to NAFC members. You still need to check out their work before hiring them — your individual tastes may differ — but this list is a great place to start your search for the one who will help preserve your memories for the years to come. And you may save a few bucks to boot!

FISHING INFORMATION NETWORK

The “Fishing Information Network” (F.I.N.) is a listing of NAFC Affiliates from across North America.

Affiliates: These businesses are not associated with the “Approved” services listed in the front of this directory. They are not required to have Club members submit reports on their businesses. They have volunteered to provide you with up-to-the-minute fishing information on their areas. Save yourself time and energy by using tips from local experts! Also save money when you visit an Affiliate who offers discounts to NAFC Members. Discounts offered to NAFC Members are preceded by “Disc:” in the F.I.N. listings. Affiliates are listed in order by state, city, and business name.
